

Relationship Between Teacher Preparation and Beginning Teacher Attrition in the U.S. (2000 to 2001)

Data are from the national Schools and Staffing Survey (SASS) teacher follow-up survey (TFS). Data are representative of all teachers in the United States. The analysis compares teachers receiving particular types of pre-service training and the attrition rates for the two different groups of teachers. In all instances, beginning teachers receiving pre-service training had far lower attrition rates than beginning teachers not receiving such pre-service training.

Analysis by Dr. Richard Ingersoll, University of Pennsylvania.

SOURCE:

Dr. Richard Ingersoll
Univ of Pennsylvania

Analysis of national Schools and Staffing (SASS) data

March 3, 2003

Dr. Ed Fuller
Co-Director of Research
SBEC